He is also professor of medicine at Temple University Medical School. He is a board-certified gastroenterologist with additional advanced training in clinical epidemiology. Dr Weinberg is an advocate for educating primary care and non-oncologist clinicians in the medical care of the cancer patient.

ACADEMIC AND PROFESSIONAL CAREER

David S. Weinberg has served as the Chair of the Department of Medicine at the Fox Chase Centre in Philadelphia since his appointment in 2008. His research centers on the prevention and control of gastrointestinal malignancies with a particular interest in biomarkers, chemoprevention, the cost effectiveness of clinical care and in novel methods to promote cancer screening utilization. He currently holds research support from the National Institutes of Health, the pharmaceutical industry, and philanthropic organizations. He is the author of more than 150 peer reviewed manuscripts and serves as the Editor-in-Chief of Gastroenterology, the specialty's premier biomedical journal.

In addition to research, Dr. Weinberg continues an active clinical practice in Gastroenterology, winning multiple "top doctor" awards. In addition, he serves as the Chief Medical Officer of the Temple University Health System's Office of International Health. Beyond activities at Fox Chase he has been appointed to leadership roles on national committees for a range of groups including the American Board of Internal Medicine, the National Cancer Institute, the American College of Physicians (ACP) and the American Gastroenterological Association (AGA).

Dr. Weinberg received his undergraduate degree magna cum laude from Yale University and his MD from Cornell University Medical College, where he earned the Research Thesis Award and was a member of the Alpha Omega Alpha honorary society. He served his internship and residency in internal medicine at Beth Israel Hospital in Boston and then his Gastroenterology fellowship training at the University of Pennsylvania. Concurrently, he was a National Research Service Award fellow in cancer epidemiology earning a masters' degree in epidemiology from the University of Pennsylvania.
